TREATMENT OF SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED DISEASES

Treatment for sexually transmitted diseases began by cleaning the wounds to prevent rotting. The treatment used mercury, which is very toxic and causes tooth loss and inflammation in the mouth. Mercury was used both externally and by injection. In addition, iodine was used. With good lifestyles, especially avoiding alcohol, there was a significant increase in the likelihood of surviving the disease.